HDR Remodeling Passes EPA Review with Flying Colors

HDR Remodeling, a Lead Safe Certified Firm, Was Audited by the EPA for Lead Based Paint Control and Passes with Flying Colors

Berkeley, CA (January 2, 2019) - HDR Remodeling, a residential home remodeling firm, recently received a certified letter notifying them that an agency of the federal government, the EPA, was auditing their procedures, policies and past practices. The EPA review was to ensure that HDR Remodeling was following all applicable federal regulations dealing with lead based paint in the homes that they had recently remodeled.

“The original in-office visit was a two-person team of inspectors from the EPA Hazardous Waste Enforcement Division. The meeting lasted about an hour and HDR was confident that they answered their questions correctly,” Chris Fellows, HDR Remodeling’s General Manager and lead employee for the company in Lead Based Paint safe practices said. He continued, “All field employees are required to take and pass the Lead Based Paint Safe Practices class. We pride ourselves on maintaining safe practices in all homes that we work in and on minimizing the disruption to the surrounding natural environment.”

Everyone at HDR Remodeling cooperated to the fullest extent with the EPA team who requested private access to the company’s client folders for closer inspection. They provided a detailed questionnaire for HDR to complete and requested considerable amount of documentation and photos for each of the selected projects. The team at HDR, headed by Fellows and ably assisted by Sue Wiseman, the Office Manager, completed the questionnaires and submitted the packets to the EPA by the deadline.

The team is proud of their superior lead based paint practices and procedures and were confident that they observe all requirements on all projects. After review, the EPA also found HDR Remodeling to be in compliance with the Toxic Substances Control Act.

HDR Remodeling has been and continues to be a Lead Safe certified firm that uses building practices that create healthier living spaces and reduces the impact on the environment.
